Senior Safe Mobility Summit

ABOUT THE SUMMIT

The Older Californian Traffic Safety (OCTS) Task Force has planned a one-day, high-impact Summit. U.S. and state leaders, subject-matter experts, and nationally recognized researchers will discuss California's efforts to keep elderly safely mobile. The intent is to show California practitioners the future trends of California's elderly driver/pedestrian population. The Summit will heighten the public's understanding of the long-term commitment needed to help older adults drive safely longer and what tools are needed to assist in making a smooth transition to alternate forms of transportation.

California's senior population (65 and older), now numbering 4 million, will grow to 5.2 million in 2020 and to 9 million a decade after that. The number of licensed drivers within this age group will ascend in parallel; growing from today's 2 ¾ million to 4 million in 2020, and 6 million in 2030.

While older drivers as a group tend to mirror the crash expectancy of those between 30 and 65, the over 80 segment does reflect disproportionate increases in both crash involvement and at-fault crash contribution. The temptation to make a blanket designation of age as the causative factor for a decrease in driving ability has been refuted by extensive research. Functional declines are uniquely individual, and sorting at-risk drivers should be approached through individual assessment.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

Summit presentations will benefit everyone involved with seniors: Area Agencies on Aging, senior center personnel, traffic engineers, doctors and the entire health care community, law enforcement departments, and aging interest groups.

Devising an assessment process which is both valid and practical is challenging. California appears to be making considerable progress through evolution of a phased system known as Three-Tier, which has moved through pilot test iterations at the Department of Motor Vehicle (DMV) offices, and is about to enter a limited implementation phase.

National Institute of Aging figures indicate that gains in the longevity of life also result in growing numbers of seniors who will lose the ability to drive, thus requiring them to use other forms of transportation to maintain their life activities. Gaining older adult recognition of the need to prepare for this change, and expanding the transportation options for them to handle this lifestyle shift represents challenges for California.

These subjects will be explored at the Summit by those with a vital interest in speaking to and for disciplines with critical roles to play within the senior population, as well as the public. Mobility has become an integral dynamic to California's lifestyle and maintaining it should be a matter of high priority, ranking with concerns about senior health care and economic well-being. This Summit is intended to put the state of California on track for appropriate mobility solutions.
